this book examines three interlocking topics that are central to all archaeological and anthropological inquiry the role of technology in human existence the reproduction of social traditions the factors that generate cultural diversity and change the overall aim is to outline a new kind of approach for researching variability and transformation in human material culture and the main argument is that these technological traditions exhibit heritable continuity they consist of information stored in human brains and then passed onto others through social learning technological traditions can therefore be understood as manifestations of a complex transmission system and applying this new perspective to human material culture builds on but also largely transcends much of the earlier work conducted by archaeologists and anthropologists into the significance function and social meanings associated with tools objects and vernacular architecture the eastern subarctic has long been portrayed as a place without history challenging this perspective history in the making the archaeology of the eastern subarctic charts the complex and dynamic history of this little known archaeological region of north america along the way the book explores the social processes through which native peoples made history in the past and archaeologists and anthropologists later wrote about it as such the book offers both a critical history and historiography of the eastern subarctic
